Who is Natasha David-Walker?

Natasha David-Walker is a native of Atlanta who returns to Georgia after studying at Oakwood College and Columbus State University, where she earned a B.S. Degree in General Studies in Biology; and the University of Memphis (U of M), where she earned a Masters in English/Professional Writing. While studying at the U of M, Natasha was hired by a non-profit community-based organization, the South Memphis Alliance (SMA) as both the Director of Public Relations and HIV Coordinator. During her tenure and in her work as HIV Coordinator, Natasha was privileged to work as a liaison for the community. As a result, she gained experience as a community organizer and activist from a grass-roots perspective.
